Wicked Ridge Unveils Improved Invader HP™ and Warrior HL™

Mogadore, OH. Two years after launching Wicked Ridge Crossbows™, a two-bow lineup of high quality, precision performance crossbows that are simple, reliable, and affordable, TenPoint is upgrading the performance of both models without increasing their price.

The new Invader HP™, originally equipped with Alph-A quad limbs, is now fitted with TenPoint's 180-pound field-proven HL Limbs™, and its D-75 string and cables with tunable yokes are now powered by TenPoint's HP™ cams. This upgraded bow assembly, mounted on a lightweight, cored semi-skeletal stock, now shoots 315 fps with 92.6 foot-pounds of kinetic energy. The Invader HP is sold in two packages, retailing at $549 and $499.

Like the Invader HP, the new Warrior HL™ is now equipped with TenPoint's field-proven HL Limbs. Its D-75 string and cables with tunable yokes are powered by precision CNC-machined aluminum wheels. With its new bow assembly design and lightweight stock, the 175-pound Warrior shoots a solid 300 fps with 84 foot-pounds of kinetic energy. The Warrior HL is also sold in two packages, retailing at $449 and $399.

“The Invader and Warrior have been wildly successful because of their superior quality in their class” said TenPoint and Wicked Ridge CEO, Rick Bednar. “By boosting their speed and power, we’ve further separated them from the competition and made them undeniably the premier performers at their price levels.”

Both models are available with a TenPoint™ 3x Multi-Line™ Scope or a Ridge-Dot™ 40mm Multi-Dot Scope and are double-dip fluid imaged in Mossy Oak's® popular Break-Up Infinity® camo pattern. Like all Wicked Ridge models, they are both equipped with TenPoint's patented DFI™ (dry-fire-inhibitor) and highly regarded 3.5-pound patented PowerTouch™ trigger.

Like all TenPoint crossbows, all Wicked Ridge crossbows are manufactured in the U.S.A.
